Dr. Glick is an economist specializing in economic and quantitative analysis. He works on complex matters involving federal and state antitrust laws, regulatory proceedings, commercial damages disputes, and financial and securities litigation, among others. Dr. Glick has used the tools of applied microeconomics, econometrics, statistics, and industrial organization to analyze various product and labor markets, including digital payments, media, pharmaceuticals, agriculture, consumer electronics, investment funds, and chemical products. Dr. Glick has worked closely with attorneys and experts in all phases of litigation, including development of case strategy, presentation of economic models, preparation of affirmative reports, rebuttal of opposing experts' analyses, and deposition and trial preparation. In his doctoral studies, Dr. Glick specialized in development, labor, and natural resource economics. He has extensive experience writing and implementing consumer and household surveys. Prior to joining Analysis Group, Dr. Glick engaged in economic and development consulting.
